

About Cookies

To provide users with more convenient services when visiting our website, we may use cookies. Cookies do not contain personal information and cannot identify individuals. Generally, cookies are text files sent from our server to your device when you use our website. This allows us to recognize your device when you visit our website again, enabling us to provide more convenient services.

Purpose of Using Cookies

The purposes of using cookies on this site are as follows:

1. To identify the device being used and prevent the cookie usage confirmation message from being displayed every time.
2. To use Google Analytics to collect and analyze site usage data, helping to improve the structure and content of the site.

About Google Analytics

Google Analytics stores information about the pages accessed, time spent on the site, access methods, and items clicked, but it does not store personal information and cannot identify individuals. For more information on Google's privacy policy and how to disable Google Analytics, please refer to the following links:
